9 control and reporting features for an effective expenses process

You have people on the road all over the United States or the world, but how do you keep track of what's going on?

How do you ensure that they are properly supported to be as effective as possible, without exposing the organization to risk or post-trip surprises?

In an agile and dynamic world, people travel to connect – with audiences and experiences, markets and opportunities. Because nothing truly connects like eye-to-eye contact.

That won't change, but new approaches can make it easier to empower highly mobile teams, while having greater visibility and control over costs.

A combination of prepaid cards and real-time reporting means you can always see what's being spent, wherever your people are.

In this Centtrip Guide to Real-time Reporting and Control, we look at nine features to consider if you're looking to upgrade your approach to expenses.

1. Organization-defined hierarchy

Every organization is different. You don't want to compromise established structures by bending to a generic, out-of-the-box system, so look for a solution that lets you define reporting and authorization hierarchies that suit your needs.

For example, a music management company might support six different touring bands, each one a separate legal entity. Within each touring party there may be different reporting lines; tour managers controlling their on-location personnel. Yacht captains will want to cascade charter budgets down through their crew, while head office sees where clients' money is being allocated and spent.

Look for a solution that can handle your unique complexity, allowing you to see and manage separate entities or cost centers from a single interface

"I was looking for a partner that could simplify our business because the traditional approach was killing our operations. It was making it very difficult to offer a simple management structure to our clients."

Rob Dolling
Director of Sales & Purchase, Management and New Construction, VERPEKA DOLLING

2. User-defined, real-time reporting

Film crews in three locations, scouts in two others. Or maybe you have a product launch road-show running in ten cities across the country. Tailored, user-defined reporting lets you decide what's important for any project. Who needs to see what, in which format? Soft or hard copies; in-app, on screen or imported? Getting the format correct at the outset saves everyone time throughout a project.

Also, look for real-time reporting. If a client wants to settle their account now, you don't want charges appearing on a card statement or expense claim two weeks later.

"The Centtrip app is ideal because it's really user-friendly and gives captains real-time reporting of transactions, 24/7 from anywhere in the world."

Farid El Khazzar, Charter Accountant, Edmiston

3. Real-time alerts

Stay in control with real-time transaction and balance alerts. Ideally, you should be able to set alert levels on a per-card basis, so that you know as soon as the CEO's card needs topping up, or whenever the intern's spent more than they should.

"If there's an issue, I can top up an individual card, or make a payment, from my mobile phone. That makes me more responsive and it's also less intrusive on, say, a Sunday morning. Things happen incredibly quickly during the filming period and having the fluidity that Centtrip enables is incredibly beneficial. Using Centtrip has been a revelation."

Gareth Jones, Independent Financial Controller and Production Accountant, Sky Atlantic's Little Birds, Lords of Chaos, This is England

4. Receipt scanning and tagging

Everyone has a smartphone, so receipt scanning and tagging from a mobile app makes it simple for cardholders to record their transactions. It's a two-second function that can save hours in expense reporting.

Scanned receipts can also improve your levels of reclaimable tax and improve regulatory compliance. No more scraps of paper, lost receipts or expenditure disputes. And, you lower the risk of staff being out of pocket because they've lost proof of a big purchase.

5. A powerful, user-friendly, mobile app

A full-function mobile app means you can respond to issues or opportunities as they arise, anywhere in the world. Look for an app that gives you more than reporting. Can you top up a card, make a payment or reconcile your records wherever you are?

For example, Centtrip's award-winning app is recognised for its innovative design and excellent user experience. It gives you the full functionality of our online platform, letting you manage your teams and transactions, wherever you (or they) are in the world.

"At the end of the night, after a gig, sitting on the tour bus, the tour manager can go onto the app and see what was spent that day: 'Oh yes, I'd forgotten about that, here's the receipt for this, there's the receipt for that.' Then, they can send it all across to us and it's done and dusted."

Lloyd Quilty, Director of the Music, Media and Entertainment practice, SRLV

6. Card safe mode...

Because accidents happen. Cards get lost or stolen ... and then get found again. With crew on the road, half a world away and moving all the time, you sometimes want the option to give a card a time-out.

A function like Centtrip's Safe Mode on the app lets you instantly lock or unlock individual cards using the app, reducing risk while maintaining flexibility.

"[Using Centtrip cards] went really, really well. [Our tour manager] had eight spare cards so that, if somebody lost a card, she could instantly lock the lost card, issue a replacement and transfer the balance to the new card within seconds. If anyone forgot their PIN, she could reissue it. She had everything under control."

Graham Watson, Head of Financial Accounts, Royal Opera House

7. ...and excellent customer service

If a card gets stolen, if you have a last-minute change in crew, or if you simply require help, you'll need the support of a customer service team that really understands their business and yours.

Sometimes, rich online functionality and intelligent apps are not quite enough, so be sure there's a human who can help, if required.

"Centtrip's understanding of the need to go above and beyond has been key. The Centtrip team understands how such situations come about and therefore they're more responsive to them than a card provider that's more used to just general business expenses."

Gareth Jones, Independent Financial Controller and Production Accountant, Sky Atlantic's Little Birds, Lords of Chaos, This is England

8. Accounts system integration and transaction import

Making life on the road easier is one thing, but what about the finance team?

Scanned and tagged receipts and user-defined reporting can save significant amounts of time, but also look for other functions.

Does the card solution integrate with your finance system?

Can you save time and reduce manual errors by importing transactions?

Also, look for a solution that supports batch transactions for when it comes to loading cards.

9. High transaction and balance limits

Having control often means giving individual's the freedom they need to do their jobs. Dealing with problems or responding to opportunities on the road requires fast decisions, often without time to check with head office.

To make your people as productive as possible, ensure your card solution provides transaction and balance limits that are high enough for your needs.

For example, the Centtrip prepaid Mastercard provides high balance and transaction limits, allowing you to:

- Spend up to $250,000 in a single point-of-sale or online transaction
- Withdraw up to $5,000 daily from 2.1 million ATMs worldwide
- Instantly transfer up to $275,000 per day to one or multiple cards

Reporting, control and empowerment

Reporting, control and empowerment often go hand in hand, supporting your organization towards greater agility and efficiency.

With effective, real-time reporting structures, alerts and visibility, you have better control, but you also have both opportunity and confidence to empower field staff to a greater degree.

That means faster, more effective decision-making on the road, more problems solved and more opportunities seized.

Organizations don't change expense management and payment processes very often, so when you do, choose a solution that will actively improve how your organization runs.

"Speed and flexibility is everything in this business... Having failsafe financial security, knowing you can provision for every eventuality, and having a financial partner that understands your world really gives you peace of mind. Centtrip's made the financial side of yacht management a pleasure."
